

T.J. Akers, author of Dusty's Adventures, was on hand selling and signing his books, along with Dusty himself.

The photo booth was a highlight for many of the children in attendance; the masks and photo props added to the fun for many.

Benjamin and his brother Peter took time out of their day to decorate a pumpkin during the free pumpkin painting activity at City Center Market's Fall Festival.

FALL FESTIVAL DRAWS CROWD

Riley was able to successfully blow a lot of very large bubbles after getting the hang of it.

Photos by Tiffany Kafer

Aubrey was ready for the cold, but hoped the sun would still be able to peak out through the clouds during the event.

The third annual City Center Market Fall Festival was held on Sept. 29 in the mall parking lot. Crowds of people gathered together to listen to music, purchase a variety of specialty items and home grown foods, and participate in a variety of events.

Succulents were among the many things available for purchase during the Sept. 29 event.

Variety of talents on display during festival

Kristin Webster brought a variety of her work to the vendor portion of the Fall Festival's event.

Cambridge artist, Marilyn Cuellar, was on site with some of her graphite drawings which really gained the interest of many shoppers at the event.