Ryan Paul's time winds down with Chaska High

BY ERIC KRAUSHAR

Ryan Paul has always been the director.

Sometimes he was the commissioner of a baseball game in the backyard. He would double as lead announcer for post-game interviews with the winning team.

Sometimes it was sing-a-longs at Christmas time with his grandpa.

There were NCAA Bracketology specials and Ryder Cup player selection shows.

Looking back, parents J.P. and Megan Paul realize how often Ryan had a microphone or headset near him.

"Passion comes easy for Ryan and

What's next for Paul?

The Section 2-4A boys basketball playoffs could be the final broadcasts for Ryan Paul on the Chaska Hawks Broadcast Network, a venture he created in his four years at Chaska High School.

Find out what is up next for Paul after high school on page 14.

Ryan Paul, founder of the Chaska Hawks Broadcast Network, is a senior at Chaska High School.

$110.5 million schools question

District to hold listening session

BY ALEX CHHITH
achhith@swpub.com

A new elementary school, an expanded bus garage and funding for long overdue maintenance on some of District 112's oldest schools.

Those were the recommendations the Eastern Carver County School's Facility Task Force gave for a $110.5 million bond referendum that could go before voters this November, according to the group's report.

District leaders will host a "Community Listening Session," to discuss growth and funding needs, 6:30-7:30 p.m. March 11 at Chaska High School, 545 Pioneer Trail.

In January, the Facility Task Force made its final recommendation to the Eastern Carver County School Board. The recommendation includes funding to build a new elementary school, costing approximately $35.5 million, a new expanded bus garage at about $13.5 million, and
