

BACK TO college

DULUTH AT A DISTANCE

Safe ways to get out and about

INSIDE: Fun stuff to do for $15 or less... Stay up-to-date on social media ... 10 Duluth-area biking trails ... Where to go when any mood strikes... Get truckin' with pop-up restaurants

EIGHT PARKS to picnic, bike, hike or study in

In a city with more than 100 parks, there's likely one that fits your needs

By Teri Cadeau
tcadeau@duluthnews.com

Chambers Grove Park

We begin far out in the Fond du Lac neighborhood on the outstretches of Duluth. One of the best features of this park is that it's fairly quiet, tucked between Highway 23 and Highway 210 along the St. Louis River. A lot of the park flooded in 2012, but has been rebuilt and renovated to include easily walkable crushed blue stone paths, water access points for canoes and kayaks, large picnic pavilions and a lot of mountain biking trails. It's a perfect picnic or study spot with lots of benches and tables.

Chambers Grove Park

News Tribune file photo

Quarry Park

Living up to its name, Quarry Park used to be the site of a crushed stone company and is most well-known for its 100-foot-high cliff left from that business.

The park, which sits at the end of North 59th Avenue West, is a popular spot for ice climbers in the winter months due to the ice flows

PARKS: Page 6

Curt Austin/traust@duluthnews.com