The Mavericks touchdown into the new semester

The Minnesota State Mavericks football team started their fall camp at the practice fields with one goal in mind: to finish 1-0 each day.

Led by the combined experience of the coaching staff under head coach Todd Hoffner, the student-athletes worked out on the gridiron under a dynamic Minnesota summer sky: cloudy one moment, sunny the other. But the players' high energy and morale remained constant throughout the grueling two-week camp.

From performing practice drills to running plays, the Mavericks looked more than prepared to start the season strong.

The Mavericks have always relied on the seniors on the team to lead the younger players in practices and games, and the training camp was no exception. Be it an offensive lineman, or a wide receiver, the seniors sharing tidbits of their knowledge with their teammates was a very common sight throughout the camp.
