West Fargo Sheyenne running back Barika Kpeenu is looking to have a big season for the Mustangs and kicked off the year with four touchdowns in the season opener against Grand Forks Red River. Kpeenu switched to No. 2 this year after donning a No. 20 jersey his junior season. No. 2 is more than just his favorite number. "It's my mom's birthday, her birthday is Dec. 2," Kpeenu said. "And whenever I see No. 2, I always remember there's two things that go above me — my Lord and savior Jesus Christ, and my family."

West Fargo Sheyenne's Barika Kpeenu gives a sky point after scoring as the sun sets Friday, Aug. 28, over Essentia Health Mustangs Stadium.

I'm not the type of person to judge you on what your political beliefs are, because everyone's different, everyone has their own side of things. But you see this and you see people are dying. Everyone has one life. And you've taken away a life where you never know what happened.

Kpeenu grew up watching Nancy Grace on primetime TV with his mom.
He saw Trayvon Martin's name flash across the screen in 2012, and he didn't understand why his mom was crying.

It was the same confusion two years later with the news of Tamir Rice's death, and other police killings of unarmed Black people that followed.

"You see that and you're like, why? Why is that happening? You're a little kid and you don't understand that," Kpeenu said. "You see your mom crying and you never know why. Why is she crying? And now I'm living in it and I'm seeing it and I'm like, wow, this is actually something that needs to be fixed and needs to be handled."

There was more to Kpeenu's game Friday than just lighting up the scoreboard. Kpeenu, who committed to play football at North Dakota State in April, exploded for four touchdowns in the Aug. 28 season opener against Grand Forks Red River.

Kpeenu looked up and pointed to the sky after all four of his rushing touchdowns Friday. He was playing for more than himself.

"BLM" was written in black marker on the white tape around his wrist as a nod to the Black Lives Matter movement. The point to the sky was also a tribute to a former classmate, Ben Merck, who died last November after being diagnosed with ALS the month before.

NDSU will allow 10K fans to see Bison play Central Arkansas

FCS playoff field next spring may be 16 teams

By Jeff Kolpack jkolpack@forumcomm.com

FARGO — Missouri Valley Football Conference commissioner Patty Viverito has been pushing for a 16-team FCS playoff field this spring. It appears she'll get her wish.

The Division I Football Championship Committee on Monday formally recommended that the Division I Football Championship Subdivision playoffs will be conducted between April 18 through May 21, 2021, with a field of 16 teams.

Viverito, a member of the Football Oversight Committee, said two weeks ago discussions centered between a 12or 16-team field, down

recommended that PLAYOFFS: Page D2

Since last year, Kpeenu has pointed to the sky after a TD as an acknowledgment to the two things he puts above himself — God and his family. This year's season opener was about Merck, who was a 16-year-old sophomore at Sheyenne High School when he died.

"I thought about him when I was playing, and it was kind of emotional for me because he was a guy who loved football," Kpeenu said. "He would do anything to play football, and I'm here living out a dream where I'm playing football. It just tells me that I can't take this game for granted and I have to play every snap like it's my last down."

Merck was on the sidelines at Essentia Health Mustang Stadium all last

"He was always there regardless of how cold it was, how warm it was," Kpeenu said. "He was always there trying to support. That really touched me, especially with what he was going through."

Kpeenu was the Eastern Dakota Conference's leading rusher last season. He tallied more than 1,200 vards, averaging more than 100 rushing yards per game.

From his wrist tape to honoring Merck, Friday's game meant something special for the Sheyenne senior. Kpeenu has paid attention to the news this year. He's seen and read the stories about the police killings of several Black men and women in recent months, including George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, and most recently, Jacob Blake in Kenosha, Wis.

"When I wrote it on my wrist, I knew I was playing for something greater than this game," he said.

Kpeenu said he wasn't much of a political guy before this year. He stayed away from discussing anything politicsrelated to avoid arguments with friends.

"I can't keep it closeted anymore. It breaks my heart and it hurts me because some people don't have to go through this," Kpeenu said. "You look at it and you're like, 'Why aren't we all the same?' Growing up, I've been here for a long time where there's cornfields everywhere and everything like that, and I've always been that one odd man out, the most different guy out

Kpeenu said he probably could have counted how many Black people were in his school when he was younger.

"You have friends who are either, they don't see color at a young age until they get older. And then you see the difference people asking you can I get the (N-word pass), can I get this and that. You kind of joke it off, try not to start anything, but now it's bigger than that. Some people are with that and some people are against that. And you never know what people stand for unless you have a discussion with them.

"I'm not the type of person to judge you on what your political beliefs are, because everyone's different, everyone has their own side of things," he said. "But you see this and you see people are dying. Everyone has one life. And you've taken away a life where you never know what happened."

The senior running back has experienced racial microaggressions, which are the everyday slights, snubs and insults in the Fargo-Moorhead area.

"It's real. It's not a thing that it's us people just trying to say 'We want power' or whatever. It's a real thing that goes on," Kpeenu said. "You see this type of stuff and you're like why is this happening? Why does this happen to a certain group of people? Whereas the other people that aren't seeing these trials and tribulations. It's something that touches Kpeenu said it means a lot to play with the Black Lives Matter acronym on his wrist.

"It's bigger than football or anything. My parents growing up, they always told me I had to be home at a certain time and I never understood that," he said. "If you get brought up in a community or a home where you're African American or you're Black, you understand what this means."

White Sox alone in first place after rallying to beat Twins

Story from late Monday's game

Field Level Media MINNEAPOLIS Luis Robert homered in the seventh inning and drove in the winning run with a ground-rule double in the ninth as the Chicago White Sox grabbed sole possession of first place in the American League Central with an 8-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins on Monday night in Minneapolis.

Jose Abreu had a tworun double among his two hits, and James McCann, Nick Madrigal, Nomar Mazara and Robert also had two hits for Chicago, which won for the 12th time in 14 games and broke a firstplace tie with Cleveland, which lost 2-1 at Kansas City earlier Monday.

The White Sox won it with three unearned runs in the ninth off reliever Taylor Rogers (1-3), taking advantage of a drop of a routine fly ball by Max Kepler one-out fly to right.

After McCann singled, Robert broke the 5-5 tie with his double down the left-field line. One out later, Mazara made it 8-5 with a two-run single to right.

Matt Foster (4-0) picked up the win in relief. Alex Colome pitched a scoreless ninth to earn his seventh save.
