

Mike Haglund lost this workshop/storage building in Thursday's storm, as well as some roofing from his cattle shed.

A worker used a boom to cut away branches from a large tree which blew over onto the garage at the Lucas and Katelyn Friedlein yard in Kerkhoven.

Heavy equipment was brought in to right several rail cars which were blown off the tracks by Pennock.

Lumber from the roof of the Glacial Plains Cooperative feed shed flew over another building before skewering a roof of the Butcher Block building.

Dan Dahl moved bags of livestock feed out of the Glacial Plains shed which was heavily damaged in the storm.

A turkey barn near Murdock lost its roof in the storm, blowing metal and insulation across Highway 12 and into a farm field.

Five large pines that adorned the railroad park in Murdock were tipped from the ground, sodden by several inches of recent rainfall.

A mass of downed power lines and pieces of the Glacial Plains Cooperative feed shed roof littered the business alley in Kerkhoven between Windy's Wellness and the Butcher Block building. Otter Tail Power crew members worked through the weekend to restore power to homes and businesses.

This DeGraff house had lost much of its shingles in the brief but powerful Thursday night storm. Roof damage from wind or falling trees was abundant.
